(1) NERIK HEINE

SF T-1 on September 3, 1963, advised that he did not attend the showing of the Estonian film by NERIK HEINE on July 13, 1963, at the Petraro Hill Neighborhood House, 353 De Haro Street, San Francisco, California, as he was in Northern California at the time. SF T-1 from friends learned the film was strongly anti-communist and entertaining in nature. It was his understanding that HEINE remained in the San Francisco area for approximately one week and collected seven to eight hundred dollars from members of the San Francisco Estonian colony. SF T-1 could furnish no additional pertinent information.

SF T-2, who is active in the affairs of the Estonian community in the San Francisco Bay Area, on September 6, 1963, advised he could furnish no additional information, other than that previously provided regarding this matter.

ALEX VISKI, 535 Arkansas Street, San Francisco, on September 11, 1963, advised that the Estonian film shown by HEINE on July 13, 1963, was attended by approximately 150 Estonians or persons of Estonian background. This exhibition was the only showing in the San Francisco Bay Area of the film, which VISKI described as strongly anti-communist and an excellent movie. According to VISKI, HEINE talked at the Estonian Church, 18th Street and South Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco, on July 14, 1963, for approximately two and one-half hours. HEINE was well received, both in connection with the film and his talk on July 14, 1963.

VISKI advised HEINE arrived in San Francisco on July 10, 1963, and stayed at VISKI's home from that date until July 17, 1963. From his contacts, he concluded that HEINE was strongly anti-communist and was under the impression HEINE left San Francisco with three hundred to three hundred and fifty dollars as a result of his visit, after paying his expenses.
